THE CARDINAL'S ROMAN TRIP Of Greater Importance Than Appears

on the Surface. While Cardinal Gibbons was in the city this week several attempts were made to interview him regarding his projected Roman trip. He was all cordiality to the newspaper scribes, but the way he talked newspaper seribes, but the way he talked volubly without saying anything about which information was desired was most surprising in a man who is not a politician. He utterly bewildered one correspondent of a Philadelphia paper. After answering the young man's questions vaguely for some time he took effectual means of getting rid of him. Taking advantage of the correspondent's question about the church's position on labor matters, he began to repeat a recent sermon on nanchists, which while interesting in itself, had no concern for the scribe, who was glad to escape the first time the cardinal stopped for breath. The cardinal would only say in regard to his trip that he was going to Rome to get the final orders connected with the cardinalsate and "for other purposes," Of these purposes he could not be induced to say anything.

A priest of this city, who is intimately associated with the cardinal, said to a Reprublican man, however, that the cardinal's mission was of the greatest importance to all Catholics, and especially to the laboring men.

"It would be manifestly improper for me mission was of the greatest importance to all Catholics, and especially to the laboring men.

"It would be manifestly improper for me to enter into particulars which the cardinal refused to give," said he, "but I can say that he goes to Rome, not only for investment with the insignis of the cardinalate, but goes also as the head of the American Catholic Church to consult with the head of the whole Church about matters which have of late become of paramount interest to all Catholies. The bishops of the United States have not yet taken any decided stand in regard to the Knights of Labor and the theories which are being spread with seemingly harmful effects, because they want to be sure of Rome's viewabefore taking action. To obviate mistakes which might result from mere hearsay, which finds its way to Rome, the cardinal goes with authentic records and a personal experience with the questions now agitating the Church. After, the cardinal's interview with the pope you will find that the prelates of the United States will to a man come out squarely and unanimously as the pops directs, and will carry out his orders without regard to consequences. The Church goes slowly, but it never yields or compromises when a conclusion has been arrived at. Cardinal Gibbons's Roman visit is, therefore, watched with intense interest by every Catholic who is interested in the welfare of his church."

"How about the cardinal's book?" was saked.

"I do not know that he is writing a book. I read a rumor of this kind in a newspaper, but the cardinal has not mentioned his intention to write a book to any of the clergy to whom I have talked."

Charles F. Stone, of whose tree and loyal devotion to his country and his country's cause our organization is a living witness; therefore, the it

Resolved, That in his death the District of Columbia volunteers, as well as our whole country, have lost one of their truest and honest friends.

Resolved, That his his patriotism, integrity, and devotion to the cause of right and justice the capital of the nation was saved from the enemy in the hour of its greatest danger and need, and that the recollections of our services during these trying times under his brave and faithful command and our association with his enduring fame will ever be a source of just pride to the members of our organization.

Resolved, That our meeting hall be draped in mourning for the period of six months, and that these resolutions be spread upon our minutes, and that a cony of the same be presented to his bereaved family, assuring them of our heartfelt sympathy.

"How much money have we on hand?" asked a member present.

"I move, then, that a committee of two be sent to New York to attend the funeral and represent the District volunteers," said the same delegate.

This was received with applause.

"Let George Wagner and A. E. L. Keese go," said a hearty-laoking member.

"That's the ticket," said two or three members at the same time, and a minute later Messrs. Wagner and Keese were chosen to go to New York, provided with plenty of money to pay their expenses and get a handsome floral tribute. The members thereupon adjourned and hustled the representatives to their homes to prepare for their journey. Messrs. Wagner and Keese left on the 10:10 o'clock train for New York city.
